

Contents

Principles of Transcription — XIII

Introduction — 1

1 The Sources — 3

- 1.1 Written sources — 4
 - 1.1.1 Historiographic and chronographic texts — 4
 - 1.1.2 Administrative and normative texts — 11
 - 1.1.3 Letters — 11
 - 1.1.4 Administrative texts — 14
 - 1.1.5 Legal texts — 16
 - 1.1.6 Oaths and treaties — 19
 - 1.1.7 An overview of legal and administrative texts — 20
 - 1.1.8 Ritual texts — 22
 - 1.1.9 Scribal, literary and scientific texts — 22
- 1.2 Non-written sources — 23
- 1.3 Non-Assyrian sources — 27

2 Narrating the Empire with Images: Assyrian Narrative Art — 29

- 2.1 Introduction — 29
- 2.2 The genesis of the Assyrian historical narrative — 30
- 2.3 The contents of the Assyrian bas-reliefs — 32
 - 2.3.1 Warfare — 32
 - 2.3.2 Hunting — 35
 - 2.3.3 Banquet — 36
 - 2.3.4 Building activities — 37
 - 2.3.5 Rituals and cults — 38
- 2.4 Where the Assyrian reliefs were seen: the contexts — 39
- 2.5 Who could see the Assyrian reliefs: accessibility and visibility — 41
- 2.6 Conclusion: history in pictures — 42

3 An Overview of the Middle Assyrian Period — 47

- 3.1 The formation of the Assyrian state: an overview — 48
- 3.2 Territorial control and administrative structures — 52
- 3.3 The centre of the kingdom and the administrative and management system — 53
- 3.4 The Jezirah, the Habur Valley, and Hanigalbat — 56

- 3.5 The Assyrian control and the Arameans — 61
- 3.6 Tiglath-pileser I and his successors — 64
- 3.7 Some conclusive notes on the Middle Assyrian conceptualisation of kingship and system of power — 70

- 4 Socio-political Landscapes from the Late 11th to the Early 8th Century BCE — 73
 - 4.1 The Syro-Anatolian sector — 73
 - 4.2 The Jezirah and the Arameans — 76
 - 4.3 The Euphratic and Transeuphratic area — 84
 - 4.4 From the Middle Euphrates to the Transtigradian regions — 96
 - 4.5 The Southern Levant — 99
 - 4.6 Babylonia — 103

- 5 The Rise of Assyria as a Supraregional Power (from Aššur-dan II to Ashurnasirpal II) — 112
 - 5.1 The proto-imperial phase in the Assyrian royal inscriptions and in contemporary sources — 112
 - 5.2 Ashurnasirpal II (883–859 BCE) — 118

- 6 The Imperial Construction (from Shalmaneser III to Aššur-nirari V) — 126
 - 6.1 Shalmaneser III (858–824 BCE) — 126
 - 6.2 Šamši-Adad V (823–811 BCE) — 136
 - 6.3 Adad-nirari III (810–783 BCE) — 142
 - 6.4 Shalmaneser IV (782–773 BCE), Aššur-dan III (772–755 BCE) and Aššur-nirari V (754–745 BCE) — 152

- 7 Tiglath-pileser III (745–727 BCE) — 161
 - 7.1 Accessing the throne — 162
 - 7.2 Expansion and provincialisation — 165
 - 7.2.1 The northern sector — 166
 - 7.2.2 The western front — 170
 - 7.2.3 The eastern front — 179
 - 7.2.4 The southern front — 180
 - 7.3 Shalmaneser V (726–722 BCE) — 184

- 8 Sargon (721–705 BCE) — 187
 - 8.1 Accessing the throne — 189
 - 8.2 Expansion and provincialisation — 191
 - 8.2.1 The northern sector — 194
 - 8.2.2 The western front — 195
 - 8.2.3 The eastern front — 209
 - 8.2.4 The southern front — 227
 - 8.3 Inglorious epilogue — 237

- 9 Sennacherib (705–681 BCE) — 240
 - 9.1 Military campaigns — 242
 - 9.1.1 The Anatolian front — 243
 - 9.1.2 The northeastern front — 244
 - 9.1.3 The southern front — 246
 - 9.2 An overall view — 260
 - 9.3 Another tragic epilogue — 264

- 10 Esarhaddon (680–669 BCE) — 266
 - 10.1 The ascension to the throne and the general political situation — 266
 - 10.2 Esarhaddon's internal policy: a general overview — 271
 - 10.3 The religious policy and Babylonia — 278
 - 10.4 The eastern sector — 282
 - 10.5 The western sector — 287

- 11 Ashurbanipal (668–630? BCE) — 293
 - 11.1 The general scenario at the beginning of Ashurbanipal's reign — 293
 - 11.2 The Egyptian campaigns — 298
 - 11.3 Anatolia and the Gyges episode — 303
 - 11.4 The Iranian borderlands — 306
 - 11.5 The southeastern sector and Elam — 308
 - 11.6 Babylonia — 317
 - 11.7 Peoples and kingdoms of the Arabian Peninsula — 323
 - 11.8 Ashurbanipal's last years — 326

- 12 The Epilogue — 329

- 13 The Urban Landscape — 338
 - 13.1 The Assyrian heartland — 339
 - 13.2 Royal cities — 343
 - 13.2.1 Assur — 343

- 13.2.2 Kalhu — 348
- 13.2.3 Dur-Šarrukin — 351
- 13.2.4 Nineveh — 356

14 The Rural Landscape — 368

- 14.1. Geography and climate in the Land of Aššur — 368
- 14.2. An evolving landscape — 371
- 14.3. Anthropoc occupation of the land — 372
- 14.4. Settlement and deportees — 375
- 14.5. Hydraulic landscape — 376
- 14.6. The decorative programme — 382
- 14.7. Communication routes — 384

15 The System of Power and Governance — 388

- 15.1. The institution of kingship — 388
 - 15.1.1. The king — 388
 - 15.1.2. The royal family and the dynasty — 391
 - 15.1.3. The crown prince — 396
 - 15.1.4. Life and people at court — 397
- 15.2. The government system — 400
 - 15.2.1. The high officials of the 9th to early 8th centuries BCE — 400
 - 15.2.2. Officialdom in the 8th to 7th centuries BCE — 402
 - 15.2.3. Other ranks at court — 407
- 15.3. The provincial system and the administrative departments — 410
 - 15.3.1. Provincial structures and officialdom — 410
 - 15.3.2. Bīt bēli, institutional loyalty and administrative justice — 414
- 15.4. Instruments and the functioning of administration and bureaucracy — 418
 - 15.4.1. The communication system — 418
 - 15.4.2. Taxation and conscription — 422
 - 15.4.3. Transmission of orders, sealing practice, and the delegation of power — 423
 - 15.4.4. The territorial organisation: towns, villages, trade colonies, and open country — 425
 - 15.4.5. Displacement of people and (re)settlement programmes — 433
- 15.5. The army — 436
- 15.6. A dynamic view: notes on the administrative system, economy and exploitation of resources — 445
- 15.7. Concluding remarks — 454

16 Gods, Kings and Empire — 456

- 16.1 The land of the god Aššur and the religious foundation of power — 456
- 16.2 Aššur, the pantheon and the king — 460
- 16.3 Ninurta — 461
- 16.4 Aššur and Marduk — 464
- 16.5 Ištar — 469
- 16.6 Rituals and the enactment and visualisation of the gods-king relation — 472
- 16.6.1 The dialogue with the gods and its developments — 473
- 16.7 Cultic performances and Assyrian religion in the conquered and annexed countries — 475

17 Scribal Culture and Sciences — 479

- 17.1 Libraries and scribal tradition and activity — 479
- 17.2 The royal control of knowledge — 484
- 17.3 The interpretive tools — 490
- 17.3.1 Debate and literature — 490
- 17.3.2 Divination and astronomy/astrology — 495
- 17.3.3 āšipūtu and medicine — 499

18 The Aftermath: Interpretations, Memories and a Complex Legacy — 510

- 18.1 Interpretations and legacy of the imperial model — 511
- 18.2 A multi-layered intellectual heritage — 519
- 18.3 The heritage of the Assyrian identity — 524

19 The Assyrian “Empire” — 530Appendix — 543*Abbreviations — 552*Literature — 556*Indices — 623

